Gradishar, a consensus All-Big Ten and All-America pick last year, is considered one of the finest linebackers in the country. Hicks also earned All-Conference and All-America honors in 1972 when he led the offense in playing time with 305 minutes. Both players are cinch All-America picks this year.

STINCHCOMB HONORED AT HALFTIME

The Ohio State University Athletic Department will pay tribute today to one of the greatest football players in Buckeye history, the late Gaylord "Pete" Stinchcomb.

Stinchcomb, an All-America quarterback on the 1920 Rose Bowl team, was elected last January 7 to the National Football Foundation Hall of Fame, becoming the eighth Ohio Stater to be accorded that honor. During today's halftime ceremonies, Athletic Director J. Edward Weaver will present Mrs. "Pete" Stinchcomb with a copy of the National Football Foundation plaque that presently hangs in the Hall of Fame in New York City.

The inscription reads: Gaylord Stinchcomb has been granted the highest honor of the National Football Foundation Hall of Fame in recognition of his outstanding playing ability as demonstrated in intercollegiate competition, his sportsmanship, integrity, character and contribution to the sport of football.

Stinchcomb played on the 1917 and 1919 Ohio State teams, but is best remembered for his performance in 1920 when he led the Buckeyes to their first Rose Bowl appearance and a 7-1 record.

Small (5-9, 150), even for those days, he was a great runner and brought many thrills to Ohio State fans during his career.

BEFORE THE GAME

By Steve Snapp

Assistant Sports Information Director

Two good reasons why Ohio State is ranked No. 1 in both the United Press International and Associated Press wire service polls this week are seniors Randy Gradishar and John Hicks — pictured on today's Washington State-Ohio State Program cover along with Head Coach Woody Hayes.

Randy, at linebacker, and John, at offensive tackle, have enjoyed tremendous careers at Ohio State. These two young men's performances have earned countless honors and their presence in the lineup is a constant source of concern to opposing coaches.

A small sample of the respect generated by Gradishar and Hicks can be seen in the remarks of Coach Jim Sweeney, who brings his Washington State Cougars to Ohio Stadium today for their first appearance since 1952 and just the second meeting ever between the two teams. Sweeney calls the Buckeye duo two of the finest players his team will face all season and two of the best in college football. Other coaches and players have expressed similar viewpoints and what greater tribute is there than the respect of your peers!

Gradishar was All-Big Ten last year and a consensus All America. He could become just the second player in Ohio State history, and the sixth in the Big Ten, to earn all-Conference honors three years in a row. He is big (6-3, 230), strong, fast and, most importantly, agile. Few, if any, linebackers can match his tremendous mobility.

Winning has been a way of life for Hicks. As a sophomore in 1970 he was a regular on the team that won the Big Ten and finished with a 9-1 record. A knee injury forced him to miss all of 1971, but he returned last year and again helped lead the Buckeyes to a Conference title and a 9-2 slate.

Should Ohio State win a second straight Conference crown in 1973, Hicks would become the first player in Big Ten history to play in three Rose Bowls.

But the Buckeyes' immediate order of business is a tough Washington State team that according to Ohio State scout Esco Sarkkinen is much better than its 1-2 record would indicate. The Cougars dropped their first two games of the year to unbeaten Kansas and Arizona State, but in both games WSU outgained its opponents in total yardage.

"This is a good team, make no mistake about it," warns Sarkkinen. "Their offense was good between the twenty yard lines in the first two games, but just couldn't score. If they had this could easily have been an undefeated team."

The offense apparently ironed out its problems last week with a 51-24 rout of Idaho. The Cougars running from both a pro set and the "I" jumped to a 20-0 lead at the end of the first quarter and played their second team much of the final half.

"Washington State is a very patient team," says Sarkkinen. "They grind out their yardage little by little and just keep moving methodically down the field."

Thus far the Cougars have been led by former Cleveland high school star Andrew Jones. Jones, a second year fullback, has carried the ball 39 times for 165 yards and three touchdowns, all tops on the team. Senior tailback Ken Grandberry has added 120 yards and needs only 201 more to become the Cougar's all time leading rusher. He was the third leading ground gainer in the Pac-8 a year ago.

The Washington State defense also has shown the ability to get into the end zone. Against Idaho, the Cougars returned two punts for touchdowns, both returns over 70 yards.

"You earn everything you get against this team and they seem to come up with the big play whether it is a punt return, fumble recovery or an interception."

Ohio State will face the Cougars minus No. 1 fullback Champ Henson who tore the medial ligament in his left knee against Texas Christian last week and will miss the rest of the season. Henson will be replaced by Bruce Elia a junior from Cliffside, New Jersey. Elia came to Ohio State as a fullback but was switched to linebacker last season. He has played exclusively at linebacker this year and in the Minnesota game was honored by the defensive coaches for making the "Play of The Week" when he forced a fumble by the Gophers Rick Upchurch and then made the recovery of the loose ball.

"We think Bruce can make the change back to fullback," predicts a confident Hayes. "He is a fine blocker and has the strength to run inside against Big Ten competition."

Elia, 6-1, 215, played on the varsity reserve team last year before switching to defense. In 18 carries he had 110 yards and three touchdowns.

PLAYERS TO WATCH

WASHINGTON STATE

MIKE CARTER — SAFETY — A versatile junior who played nose guard and linebacker for the Cougars as a freshman. Moved to strong safety last year because of his excellent quickness. Finished 1972 with four pass interceptions (second best on the team) and 58 tackles. Plays the ball very well . . . is extremely intelligent.

ANDREW JONES — FULLBACK — A 6-2, 215-pound junior from Cleveland East Tech High School who moved to fullback last year and averaged 4.1 yards a carry. Expected to become one of WSU's all-time leading rushers. Very fast and strong. A punishing runner who is hard to bring down.

OHIO STATE

ARCHIE GRIFFIN — TAILBACK — Named Offensive Player of the Week after rolling up 119 yards in 14 carries against Texas Christian. His 68-yard touchdown run on the second play of the game put the Buckeyes ahead for good. In two games the 5-10, 185 sophomore has amassed 248 yards and has an 8.5 yard average per carry.

JIM COPE — DEFENSIVE END — Picked as "Buck of the Week" for his performance against Texas Christian last week. The 6-2 222-pound junior from McKeesport, Pa. had eight tackles against the Horned Frogs and recovered a fumble. He earned 2½ Buckeye-leaves for his work. Cope, shown above as he prepares to move in on a TCU ball carrier, also had one tackle behind the line of scrimmage that resulted in a 12 yard loss for the Horned Frogs.

WOMEN'S SPORTS TEAMS EYE 1974

Intercollegiate Athletics for women at The Ohio State University has come a long way since 1941 when four teams played a total of nine games.

In the 33 years since that first season, seven sports have been added so that during the 1972-73 season, 218 women athletes participated on eleven intercollegiate teams. Each of those teams: basketball, competitive swimming, fencing, field hockey, golf, gymnastics, synchronized swimming, softball, tennis, track and field and volleyball finished last season with a winning record.

Deborah Wilson will begin her second year as basketball coach with a strong young team after losing only two seniors. The team will be defending its 15-1 season record and the state championship.

Most people are just beginning the day at 6:15 a.m. At that hour, the competitive swim team, coached by Linda Hall, is hard at work in the Natatorium pool. The team swam to a near perfect season last year, the high point being their 60-53 defeat of nationally ranked University of Cincinnati. They will be working this year towards bettering their fourth place finish in the Big Ten.

The fencing team experienced both growth and prominence last season under the coaching of Kit Boesch. After an impressive 8-3-1 record and a 14th place finish in national competition in 1973, this year's veteran team looks forward to even greater success.

The field hockey team will be working under a new coach, Harriet Reynolds. The team will be playing most of the games on the Astro Turf in Ohio Stadium which makes the game very fast and the stick work easier to see.

Sue Collins will be leading the golfers through a two-part season this year as they compete in several big matches this fall, with an additional intercollegiate schedule in the spring. Last year's team placed in the top three teams in every competition, soundly defeating Denison, Ohio University, Bowling Green, Kent State and Penn State.

A 7-3 record for 1973, and the continuation of Kitty O'Brien in her fifth year as head coach, should give the gymnastics team a great deal of incentive for a successful season. With several veteran gymnasts returning, this year's team promises to be strong and capable as it welcomes nationally ranked Indiana State to their schedule.

Softball has enjoyed continued success since its reintroduction into the intercollegiate family three years ago. Last year's team compiled an 8-1 season record and hosted the first Ohio State Invitational tournament in which they placed third. This year's team will be coached by Harriet Reynolds.

The synchronized swimming team, coached by Mary Jo Ruggieri, has not known defeat the past four years. Since 1970, Ohio State's team has won the Midwest Synchronized Championships four consecutive times, a feat never before achieved by any team.

Mary Raysa and the tennis team have three consecutive state championships behind them as they enter the 1974 season. Last year's record was 7-2 in season play with a second place finish in the Big Ten Tournament. The team hopes to place at the top this year when Wisconsin hosts the Big Ten in April.

Track and Field had a rebuilding year and now approximately 30 women comprise the team. Ohio State placed in the top five in each meet a year ago, winning both the Michigan State and Ohio State Invitionals.

The volleyball team carries a strong 16-4 record into this year's schedule as Sue Collins takes over the head coaching duties. Wooster and Dayton put the only tarnishing marks on the regular season record a year ago. The team is looking for a victory at the state tournament after winning the consolation bracket in 1973.

The women's intercollegiate program was developed by the Women's Division of Physical Education and was totally housed within that Division from 1941 until 1970. In 1970 the program became a part of the Division of University Recreation, Intramural Sports and Women's Intercollegiates within the Area of Student Affairs, and at that time the operating budget came from the Office of Vice President for Student Affairs.

This fall another big step forward has been made in the program. The women's intercollegiate program is enjoying an added hand of support as the Athletic Department provides a majority of the operating budget. For the first time, the female coaches are on a split contract between the Athletic Department and the School of Health, Physical Education and Recreation, just as their male counterparts are. The new association with the Athletic Department adds great strength to the program.

ABOUT WASHINGTON STATE UNIVERSITY

Main entrance to WSU campus. Stephenson Dormitory Complex in foreground.

Washington State University, the land-grant institution for the state of Washington, is designed to serve the educational needs of the state, to carry on basic and applied research and to disseminate the practical results of research to Washington citizens.

The university, which opened in 1892 with 21 students, now consists of eight colleges and a graduate school, offering undergraduate and advance training in numerous areas of intellectual and technical specialization. The university enjoys a national reputation for high academic standing through important contributions to knowledge by its faculty and outstanding accomplishments in career fields by WSU graduates. Many staff members have been honored by Guggenheim awards and Fulbright scholarships; they have participated in international conferences; and they have served as consultants to state, national and foreign agencies. Many hold national and regional offices in academic and professional organizations, and others have authored outstanding textbooks and scholarly studies.

Evidence of Washington State's academic reputation is contained in the fact that it was awarded a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, the national liberal arts honorary, in 1928. It also has a chapter of Phi Kappa Phi, national scholastic honorary, as well as chapters of almost all the important national professional and scholastic societies.

The teaching staff, numbering nearly 800, provides a student-teacher ratio of approximately fifteen to one for more than 14,000 students. These students and teachers work on a campus of approximately 2,000 acres with about 100 major buildings.

Recent additions to the campus include important teaching and research facilities — a nuclear reactor, an agricultural sciences complex, veterinary clinic, and engineering, chemistry, physical sciences, fine arts, social science, speech and English buildings.

A new addition to the campus is the Performing Arts Coliseum. Located on the old football practice field, the new facility will seat more than 12,000 for basketball and 13,000 for fine art performances. It was used for the first time when the 1973 graduating class held its commencement ceremonies there June 3, and the Cougars will play their first game there Dec. 1 against Louisiana State University. This coliseum along with the newly remodeled Clarence D. Martin Stadium & Academic Center gives WSU athletic facilities second to none in the Pacific-8.

Another building complex which was completed during the 1972-73 year was the Edward R. Murrow Communication Center which houses the campus radio and television stations plus the department of communications.

WSU is one of the largest residential universities in the West, housing nearly eighty per cent of its students on the campus. Within walking distance of classrooms, library and centers of social life, university students learn in an atmosphere which provides for personal and intellectual development.

Which means that now you can do a whole lot more than look at luxury cars in football programs. You can participate.

At any Chevrolet dealer's.

All this, for the price of a Chevelle.

University Archives Provide Link With History

William J. Vollmar
University Archivist

By Ohio State University News Services

Behind a metal-grated door on the third floor of Ohio State's College of Engineering are stored more than a quarter of a million items recording the history of the university, all neatly packed and catalogued in cardboard boxes.

Bill Vollmar unlocks his domain, the University Archives, to reveal 1,500 cubic feet of records representing what he regards as "a complete cross-section of the university." As director, he's in charge of accumulating, sorting, cataloguing and maintaining significant reports and correspondence from each administrative office and academic department. In addition, he is responsible for about 66,000 images in the Photo Archives.

Ohio State's Archives were established in 1960, under the direction of James E. Pollard, who retired this year after 50 years of service to the University. Vollmar was named director in 1969.

Besides the research papers of distinguished faculty members and reports from administrators, the archives also include other reference material. Vollmar lists 230 feet of bound volumes including university histories; 700 reels of microfilm, most of which were grade reports; 1,200 tapes; 8,000 disc recordings; and 130 maps and blueprints. Some of these older items have been sealed in acetate to protect against deterioration.

In order to preserve the paper material, the archives is kept at a constant 70 degrees and a relative humidity of 45-55 per cent. The photo vault is kept at an even more controlled atmosphere.

Although the archives is locked at all times, anyone may use its material simply by requesting it through the archives staff. Students may use material at the archives offices.

According to Vollmar, an increasing number of graduate students are using the archives, and several have based their dissertations on its material. Vollmar said one of the most popular topics for undergraduates is the history of campus buildings, particularly the former president's residence and the Faculty Club.

"One of our little known responsibilities is that of a reference service," Vollmar added. "Of course, we don't conduct any extensive research for people here, but if someone calls with a specific question, we'll try to dig out the answer for them."

Vollmar also spends much of his time in the accumulation and cataloguing of the material. "Most of the time we go to the departments themselves," he explained, "although sometimes they just send their old records to us. Any record on campus which is seven years old or older is officially inactive, and should go to the archives. There's a state law which says that none of this material can be destroyed or thrown out without the consent of the archivist."

The archives has somewhat of a "schizophrenic personality," according to Vollmar. "We operate under two conflicting policies, records management and learning resources. The first asks that we throw everything out that isn't really necessary. The latter says we should save everything that might help someone in his research someday."

Vollmar has one assistant to help sort through the mountains of material he receives each year. They set up their own cataloguing system, according to box and record group.

"As we sort through the papers, we can eliminate a lot of duplication," Vollmar noted. "Another advantage to having archives is that it provides cheaper storage space than an office filing system. Cardboard boxes cost a lot less than metal filing cabinets and we can pile them as high as we need to."

The class of 1923 recently presented the archives funds to buy microfilm equipment. Beginning this fall, the archives will begin the process of microfilming some of its research material. Some of the older papers, however, will be saved as historical documents.

Vollmar said his job as archivist is becoming increasingly difficult as telecommunication improves. "Since the '30's, written documentation has gone downhill. It's easier these days to pick up the phone than to write a letter. Now correspondence leaves out 'the why,' and merely refers to 'the topic we discussed on the phone yesterday.' That's only half of the story."

He pointed out that this decline of written documentation is not unique to Ohio State, but is a problem encountered by historians throughout the world.

"It's not that we're not keeping good, accurate records anymore," he explained. "It's just that people don't write down their reasoning as much as they used to. The archives tries to preserve their reasoning as much as possible."

MADE EXCLUSIVELY FOR US IN IRELAND AND SCOTLAND

The Irish and Scottish cloth designers have long been famed the world over for their beautiful colourings and blendings of colours and much of their inspiration comes from their mountain-, land-, and sea-scapes.

These have set the standard for hat wearers in this country for many years.

Many of our patrons proudly tell us they have worn the same "walking hat" since their undergraduate days.
